

Measure your resilience (quiz)

Perhaps you wonder if you have the ability to be resilient—to bounce back—when serious challenges come your way. If so, take a few minutes to place a checkmark next to statements with which you agree.

	Yes	No
1. Do you feel like you've gotten stronger after having faced tough times?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

3. Do you talk about your experiences with friends, family members or work colleagues when hard times hit?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
4. When you're surprised by a sudden change or problem, do you manage to see the challenge as temporary and believe you can overcome it?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
5. Have there been times when you have transformed misfortune and, over time, found benefits or lessons in the bad experiences?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
6. Have you ever found humor in situations that seem mostly disastrous, or otherwise said to yourself, "This calamity will make a great story someday"?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
7. Instead of feeling discouraged or angry for a long period, are you able to fairly quickly get past an uncomfortable situation that may have at first put you in a bad mood?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
8. Are you comfortable asking others for help when you can't figure out how to handle a perplexing challenge?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
9. When confronted with a stressful situation, do you remember to take care of yourself in ways that help you stay healthy?	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

If you had more “yes” than “no” responses in the columns above, then you probably possess a good range of coping skills that can help you deal with adversity. If the majority of your responses were “no,” then you have the opportunity to build your resilience skills by:

- Learning to see challenges in a positive light even though they may at first seem overwhelming;
- Sharing your feelings with other people without worrying about “toughing it out” alone;
- Learning to be more flexible when challenges arrive rather than insisting on a single solution;
- Taking care of yourself by getting enough rest, eating a balanced diet and using relaxation techniques; and
- Expecting change to occur constantly in life, and viewing change as a way to learn and grow.
